

When a violent explosion no human could possibly survive shakes the foundations of Griffin University, Grayville's police rush to the scene to find the cause of such destruction. Are the three students who mysteriously disappeared at the same time responsible for the attack? A witness seems to think so and offers an unbelievable explanation. The question is: do you trust his story?

This time, believing may require more than seeing.

Only in the moment of confrontation with their evil adversaries can superheroes prove their true qualities. For the eight students of Greifswald's Institute of British and North American Studies who, in the summer semester 2015, united in the desire to produce a 20-minute movie in English about superheroes, those adversaries appeared as Time, Weather, and Equipment. To defeat them, the students gathered their creativity, their enthusiasm, and their amazing *SUPER!*powers. This is their film, evidence of their struggle, and ultimately of their victory.
